BY THE AUTHOR OF "SIMON SUGGE Some years ago I knew an individual whose sobriguet was "Col. Hawkins," who was the most perfect cimen of the dare-devil, frontier man that I ever saw, at least in Alabama. His real name was Jim Fielder-to which his neighbors frequently added the expressive pre-fix "DEVIL." And he was a Devilfearing neither God, man, nor beast, and if not invulnerable, possessing at least a tenacity of life that was and in five seconds there was a universal stampede. most astonishing. He had been once struck down with a broad-axe, and his brain absolutely cloven to a considerable depth, and for several inches in length; and after him the Colonel dashed, with all his dreadyet he made no particular difficulty of surviving, and that, too, with all his faculties uninjured.

The "Colonel" being what, in his region and times, was called a cow-driver, had cultivated the art of equitation, until he and his favorite bay-whom he named "Hell,"-became a perfect centaur. No feat was too difficult for them. I have myself seen them dog, and when the Colonel got drunk and lay in the road, would stand by him and guard him for hours. top of his voice, rode furiously out of town.

"Col. Hawkins" used to be very fond of attending the Circuit Courts of his county, at which, after a time, he became an insufferable nuisance. The Sherills were always afraid of him; the tayern-keepers dreaded him; and the Judges never could get hold of him. In one of his mad freaks, I have seen him, while court was in session, mounted on "Hell," charge up the steps and into one door of the Court House, furiously along the aisle, and, with a tremendous leap, olear the stens, out of the other.

I remember well the first session at which I ever saw him. Court was held, temporarily, in a twostory wooden building; one end of which rested on the ground, the other (the front,) being on brick work, or blocks, two or three feet high. A Judge was presiding whose distinguished trait was a tyranical petulance—a judicial wasp whose sting was ever protruding. His Honor, however, met his match in Col. Hawkins," and, no doubt, thinks of him to this day with emotins of horror.

For the first day or two of the court week, our hero, being rather sober, behaved remarkably well; but about the middle of the week he got on a regular frolic, and immediately turned his attention to the disturbance of the court. For this purpose, he had prepared a number of loaves of bread, and collecting all the scraps of the kitchen of his tavern, he proceeded to "fort" himself under the Court-house. His citadel was impregnable on one side, by reason of the house having one end on the ground; and all the other approaches the Colonel industriously fortified by building walls of large loose rocks; leaving only a single entrance, and a few port-holes through which he might cast his missiles at any adventurous

Here it must be remarked, that the town was particularly populous in the dog way—if that be not a solecism-and Jim being aware of the fact, had provided himself with a hunting horn, an instrument on of hounds; and as to the curs, though I never took their census, I can certify that they were multitudi-

Prepared now at all points, the Colonel took his place within his "fort," and waited until a sound of bustling from above indicated that the court was transacting business. Then, toot, toot, to-toe, to-tootoot, toot toot! went his horn.

Three "several and distinct" simultaneous howls, from different quarters of the town, responded to the Toot! toot! to-too! to-too! toot! toot! toot!

Again three dire howls responded; but this time they seemed converging to a common centre-Jim's "My God, Mr. Sheriff," said the little tiger on the bench, "what is all that blowing and howling a-"I s'pose," replied the Sheriff, with a wild look, for he knew the Tartar he had to deal with, "I s'pose

it's a comp'ny of hunters going out after deer." "Wal"-the Judge invariably sounded the e in well, a short-" Wal, my God! do the hunters of this country hunt on the public square !"

Toot! toot! toot! to-hoo to-to-to-to to-hoot! went Jim's horn again: and the hounds, with a multitude of their half-brethren "of low degree," having by this time assembled under the house, sent up a long, a loud, and a most deafening response. Jim then gave them all some bread and meat scraps, in token of their approval. He then blew "another blast," and again fifty or sixty canine throats belched forth the hideous sounds!

"My God! Mr. Sheriff, I fine you ten dollars, said the irritated Judge-"Go and stop that noise." The Sheriff went down, and having ascertained the strength of the Colonel's position, endeavored to coax him out.

"Come out, Jim, old fellow, and I'll stand treat; I will, by George !" "Toot! toot!" was the reply; and then the howl from the dogs who began "to let themselves out." The Judge fined the first deputy, up stairs, five dollars, for the new attack upon his nerves. Several adventurous special deputies at length went under, to take our hero "by storm;" but they very soon returned with bruised heads and defiled clothing. Jim, with inimitable sang froid, held the horn to his mouth with one hand, while with the other he sent his rocks with terrible effect at his assailants .-His allies, too, the dogs, gave him occasional sly assistance, by nibbling at the more exposed parts of the persons of the invaders; and these being obliged to go "upon all fours," under the house, these "attacks in the rear" were in the highest degree vexatious and Toot! toot! toot! Howl! howl! howl! howl! The contagion spread to the crowd assembled on the public square, "And each-for madness ruled the hour-unpunishable.

Would try his own expressive pow'r."
Yell after yell went up from the crowd! All was confusion; and as peal after peal of the odd and mingled discord floated up, roar after roar of unsuppressed laughter shook the Court-room! The Judge was pale with rage. Every fibre of his frame trembled with excitement; but he could only fine—so he fined the Sheriff an hundred dollars for reporting the Colonel's fort impregnable, himself invincible, and his forces determined to stand to him, to a dog! He then adjourned court, "until the nuisance could be abated."

ped all legal proceedings, he suspended his blasts, and dealt out double rations to his forces. From one about six hours, steady, I made a pie on 'em, both of his port-holes, in front, observing that the Judge together, and baked him agin! was strolling about on the square, and that the Sheriff was consulting with a dozen or so of his friends, he watched his epportunity, and horn in hand, he slipped out, unperceived except by friends, and reached his steed, which was tied in the bushes near by. Mounting "Hell," he "blew a blast so loud and long." that every hound responded at once; and in a moment more, dashed in upon the square, with his followers in full cry! Here he went, "like mad," now knife into it, whenclearing an old woman and her cake stand at a jump, and now bounding lightly over a group of half a dozen on a fallen log. Ye gods! how the crowd scattered! Espying the Judge, he dashed up to himhis horn the while, evoked the most hideous howls ble." Round and round he dashed—the from his troop Judge petrified in centre, pawed, mouthed, and smelt of by the hounds, and stunned-overpowered by their hideous din! Never before (I speak metaphorically) was the ermine so villainously defiled!

Having accomplished his purpose of "bedevilling" a Judge, who had the reputation of being a Martinet, Jim retreated, in good order, from the square to the thicket at the back of the court-house. He knew what would follow, and fully prepared for it. He had procured him a whiskey barrel, minus one head, and a foot or so above the bung hole, had cut an opening about six inches in diameter. By small cords, he had attached to the outside of the barrel two large bundles of fodder, a fragment of old stove-pipe, and three superanuated coffee pots.

As soon as Jim had left the square, the Judge ordered the Sheriff to summon a posse, and take him, at all risks-and the Sheriff instantly summoned twenty or thirty of the hundreds who had horses hitched on the square, and ordered them into line to receive his directions. The Judge borrowed a pony to go along, and see his mandate executed. Jim, who had been watching their operations slyblast, mounted "Hell," and drawing the barrel up after him, placed it over himself; and taking the sisters—to the town of Belfast, for the purposes of ly, as soon as they seemed nearly complete, blew a reins through the hole, rode leisurely on, till in view from his dogs, the rustling of his fodder, the clangor of his coffee pots, and the sonorous gong notes of his stove-pipe, he charged, at full speed, upon the Sheriff and his posse comitates!

Talk of May! Talk of Murat! There was never charge so reckless or effective as Jim Fielder's charge upon the Sheriff and his squad!

Toot! toot! toot! bang! clang! bang! howl! howl! howl! and he was in their midst! The horses of the squad, maddened with fright, reared and plunged, and either threw their riders or dashed off with them precipitately from the field. The horses hitched about at racks and trees participated in the panic, ful din, in full blast! On, on, on! at a killing lick! Down, down the hill to the old tan-yard!-where suddenly Judge and pony find a "tight at," in an ancient but not inedorous vat!

Satisfied-almost-with his victory, our hero charged back to town, putting to flight everything equine, of which he came in view, and leaping his horse into do things which would make the gallant Col. May's the piazza of a grocery, pitched his barrel through blood run cold. Hell was the most perfectly trained animal that I ever saw; followed his master like a perty of the proprietor—like lightning passed in at one door and out at another-and whooping at the That Judge hasn't been on that circuit since!

Now I am dead sure the old Colonel will ask me if I impounded Big Brindle, and I'll bet I puzzle him as bad as he did me."

The next day the Colonel gave a dinner party, and as he was not aristocratic, Allen, the overseer, sat down with the company. After the second or third glass of wine was discussed, the Colonel turned to the overseer and said; "Eh, Mr. Allen, did you impound Mr. Brindle, sir ?" Allen straightened himself, and looking round at the company, said: "Yes, which he was a most capital performer. There were I did, sir, but old Brindle transcended the impannel in the village, at the time, I think, three full packs of the impound and scatterlophislocated all over the equinimity of the forest," The company burst into an immoderate fit of laughter, while the Colonel's face reddened with discomfiture.

"What do you mean by that, sir ?" said he. "Why, mean, Colonel," said Allen, "that old Brindle being prognosticated with an idea of the cholera, ripped and tared, snorted and pawed dirt, jumped the fence, tuck to the woods, and would not be impounded no Auditor.

This was too much; the company roared again, in which the Colonel was forced to join, and in the midst of the laughter, Allen quitted the table, saying to himself as he went, "I reckon the Colonel won't ask me to impound any more oxen."

The Toughest Game Cock on Record. Whilst travelling recently in Virginia, I became acquainted' with a "rale Down Easter," who had me "all the way from Varmount," and who flourished under the distinguished appellation of "Colodel Phil." One of nature's queer lumps of Clay, is Phil. He is, undeniably great at any and everything,

"cock fighting" especially. "I once had a cock," "said he, "that could jist rip the rag off all nature. I fout him agin everything in Virginny, and whipt 'em all, ten; afterwards gin 'em all a heel and whaled 'em all over agin leastwise, them that I hadn't killed afore.
